KARRATSKY HEARING

Murderer Either Demented or Else is putting up a Pretty Good Game of Bluff.

Abraham Karratsky, the man who shot and killed Mrs. Samuel Finkelstein a week ago last Monday, was taken before Justice Brown on Friday for the purpose of having his preliminary examination. He started for the justice's office in custody of the sheriff, but had only gone a short distance when he hung back and refused to go any further. The sheriff attempted to get him to continue on his way, but as he refused to move a dray was called and the man loaded on the wagon and taken to his destination. When he arrived at the place he still refused to move and it was necessary to half carry him up the stairs in order to get him to the justice's office.

When brought before the justice he refused to have anything to say, and it was impossible to determine whether he was scared out of his wits or whether he is demented, and does not realize what is being done with him. It is the opinion of some that as he came from Poland where lawbreakers are summarily dealt with, he imagined when he was taken from the jail that he was to be shot at once and that it was as well for him to accept his fate silently as for him to make any play at all.

Several witnesses were examined at the hearing, but their testimony threw very little light on the matter, other than has been aired heretofore.

The first witness called was George Finkelstein, step-son of the murdered woman. He stated that he saw Karratsky come upstairs the morning of the murder and take all of the stuff out of his trunk, after which he tried to get into the trunk. The trunk was not big enough, however, and the boy saw him take something out of the trunk and put it into his hip pocket. He thought that it was a revolver and bullets, but upon cross examination he admitted that he did not know what it was. The boy was also the only witness to the murder.

He stated that he was standing at the pump when Karratsky came out, and that soon after Mrs. Finkelstein came out, when almost immediately Karratsky stepped up to her and knocked her down and drawing his revolver, fired four shots, one of which took effect in the woman's breast near the heart. After he had shot the woman he pointed the revolver at the boy and told him to stand back. Then he started for town. The boy and his uncle secured a rig and also started for town to get a doctor, and they caught up with Karratsky near the four mile creek. The man again flourished his revolver and told them to stay back, and they turned their backs and went back home, being afraid that he would shoot them also.

The boy stated on the first examination that he had never seen Karratsky act queer, but said that the man had often claimed that he was sick, having great pains in his head, from which he was unable to work. The boy also stated that in his opinion the man was too lazy to work. Upon being recalled later in the day he stated that he had seen the man lying on the ground in a fainting fit some time before. As to the quarrel that had occurred the night before the boy stated that there had been a quarrel which had been brought about by Mrs. Finkelstein telling Karratsky that he would have to get out with his family as it would not do for them to be left there as it might involve them in a lawsuit. Some words ensued and the boy stated that the matter of shooting had been brought up. Also that several times before Karratsky had stated that he would shoot the man who had induced him to buy the property in Saratoga. The boy stated that there had been no blows struck the night before although Karratsky had made an attempt to strike Mrs. Finkelstein, but was prevented by the interference of Finkelstein. He also stated that there had been no quarrel the following morning when the murder had occurred.

Mrs. Looze and Bellin were also examined. They having been called to attend the woman. When they arrived the woman had been dead some hours, and their testimony was only of a "technical" character, telling of the location of the woman and the probable result in case it was a bullet wound.

Samuel Finkelstein, the husband of the murdered woman, was also examined, but he did not witness the shooting, and his testimony was largely along the line of telling what might have led up to the trouble. His statement was substantially as has been published before, claiming that all of the quarrel had occurred the night before, and that it was caused by his wife telling the Karratskys that they would have to vacate the place, as the Finkelstein family was going to move and that they did not want to leave them there, owing to the fact that the new tenants might bring suit against him about the matter.

Taken altogether the hearing brought out very little that was not already known. There is no question but what Karratsky committed the crime, but just what the immediate motive was can only be surmised. He may be crazy or he may be a moral degenerate who knows no better than to commit a deed of this sort, or he may be a little of both.

The case was adjourned until the 26th of April.

WAS A SUCCESS.

Stock and Cattle Fair Attended by a Large Number of Farmers and Others.

The first monthly stock and cattle fair held in this city on Tuesday was quite a success from every point of view. Farmers began to arrive at an early hour in the morning and some of them came a distance of twenty and thirty miles to see what was going to be done on that occasion. A large number of cattle, horses, hogs and chickens were brought in and displayed on the market, and a goodly number of animals changed hands. Some who wanted to buy complained that those who had stuff to sell wanted too much for it and those who wanted to sell said that the buyers did not offer enough for what they wanted. However, this is no more than can be expected, as the seller always wants all he can get and buyer wants his things as cheap as it is possible to obtain them.

The number that changed owners was probably all that could be expected at the first event of this kind, and there is little question but that future fairs even better results will be accomplished. The sellers all congregated on the west side at the market square on Tuesday, and this part of the city was well peopled all day. One enterprising firm was on hand with a gasoline engine which was operating a feed mill, and attracted considerable attention.

Gospel Meetings Continue.

The evangelistic services that are being held in the G. A. R. hall by Evangelists DeVoe and Shields of the Christian church are attracting large audiences and are proving of much interest to all who have attended them.

Mr. DeVoe is a clear reasoner and forcible speaker, while Mr. Shields is one of the best singers that ever came to Grand Rapids and delights his audience with his beautiful songs.

These services will continue indefinitely and the public is cordially invited to attend them.

There will not be any service this evening, Wednesday, on account of the G. A. R. having to use the hall, but every other evening until further notice.

Declamatory Contest.

The final Declamatory Contest, at which two representatives will be chosen to represent our high school in the league declamatory contest at Wausau, will be held on Friday evening of this week. At the two preliminary contests the six best contestants were selected to participate in this final contest. This promises to be a spirited contest. A general admission fee of ten cents will be charged to cover necessary expenses.

Owing to the large number of scholars in the public school who wished to take part in this contest it was necessary to hold two preliminary contests, from which the best were picked. As the scholars are taking a great deal of interest in the matter it promises to be very interesting and of more than ordinary merit. A general invitation is extended to the public.

IMPROVEMENT BILL.

Some Facts Concerning the Proposed Improvements on the Wisconsin River.

In view of the fact that many newspapers throughout the state are making considerable noise concerning the bill which proposes improvements in the Wisconsin river, it is possible that the following from the Merrill Advocate may be of interest to Tribune readers:

There has been considerable discussion respecting a bill now before the Legislature which, if enacted, would authorize the establishment and maintenance of a system of water reservoirs for the purpose of producing a uniform flow of water in the Wisconsin River. Some adverse comments have been made upon the bill, but we think that all adverse sentiment arises out of a misunderstanding of the objects of the plan. We are informed that all the owners of water power upon the Wisconsin River were consulted in respect to the measure before the bill was introduced, and that every water power owner is heartily in favor of the bill.

The general impression seems to be that the bill would grant great powers, but an examination of its provisions, especially in its amended form shows that the powers granted are very carefully restricted and controlled so that they cannot be used to the injury of anybody.

The objects of the measure, as shown by the bill and as explained by those urging it, are to store up in the lakes near the head waters of the Wisconsin River excess water in times of freshet and gradually discharge it in times of low water and drought, thereby in the first instance diminishing the floods upon the Wisconsin River and in the second instance improving the supply of water in times of drought and thus producing as nearly as possible a uniform flow of water in the river. The grantees are given no power to acquire use or lease water power and cannot maintain any dam on the Wisconsin river except in the northern part of Vilas county. It is hard to find any objection to such a measure. The Wisconsin river would certainly thereby be improved throughout its length both as a commercial river and as a means of beauty and pleasure.

The Wisconsin river from Nekeosa to Eagle river can be made to produce enough water power to turn the wheels of enough manufacturing to support a population of a million people, provided the flow of water can be regulated in some degree of uniformity. The accomplishment of such a development in the Wisconsin River Valley as would be aided by this measure ought to be something to which every person in the valley should lend support.

The theory has been expressed that the bill is intended as a means of the promoters making a lot of money. Such a result is carefully guarded against by the form of the bill. Practically the only source of income from the reservoirs would be tolls from the owners of improved and operated water powers, and it is provided in the bill that such tolls shall never exceed an amount sufficient to pay operating expenses and seven percent on the money invested. The system being for a public purpose, it will always be subject to legislative control as fully as any other public service enterprise, such as railroads, bus companies, etc. The legislature will always have the power to restrict the tolls or otherwise regulate the reservoirs. As a consequence the books of the concern would always be subject to inspection by the state. In addition thereto it is provided that anyone subject to tolls shall have the right to have the quality or justice thereof reviewed either by the court or by a competent hydraulic engineer to be appointed by the court as he may elect. Every chance for the charging of excessive tolls seems to be carefully guarded against.

It seems to us that there are only three classes of people who are directly interested in the measure: First the promoters of the measure; Second, the water power owners on the Wisconsin River who may be charged with tolls; Third, the residents on the banks of lakes where the reservoirs will be. Outside of these classes it must be confessed that everybody on the Wisconsin River Valley will be benefited by the system. The development and prosperity of the valley will aid in the prosperity of every resident; the maintenance of a uniform flow of water in the river will be a source of beauty and pleasure; the diminishing of floods will be a source of profit to every riparian owner. If, therefore, the measure does not permit any undue compensation to promoters and does not permit any oppression of the water power owners, it is hard to see how anything but good can come out of the measure, excepting possibly to some few on the bank of the lakes where property may be taken for flowage purposes. And to such few even there can be no damage done, without making just compensation and therefore no actual injury will be accomplished. No highway can be opened without somebody's land being taken therefor.

We are informed that fully seventy-five percent of the reservoirs that will be needed for the system are already created and in use. They were originally created for the purpose of furnishing floods for log driving. Practically every stream emptying into the Wisconsin River that is large enough to float logs has been improved by a River improvement company by the building of dams for flooding purposes and as a consequence a large majority of the reservoirs available have already been used as flooding reservoirs for log driving or other flooding purposes. They are owned, however, by so many different concerns, extending so far in number, and reference to a uniform flow of the water in the Wisconsin River, that the water now stored and discharged are mainly wasted. One of the main objects of the plan now being pushed is to collect all of these reservoirs under a single management and convert the waters, and so handle them as to best produce a uniform flow. It is said that very few lakes now in use as reservoirs would be in position to use and that those already in use would be handled in such a way as to cause less actual injury to the beauty of the lakes than has hitherto been caused by the various recent improvement, logging and log driving companies.

Such a system as is proposed to be established is not new in practice. The United States government controls such a system on the Fox River in this state. There is another system on the head waters of the Mississippi in Minnesota. In the old manufacturing centers of the East—Maine, New Hampshire and New Brunswick—particularly there are a large number of systems operating upon the various streams. All of them are producing the most highly beneficial effects and are doing more for the development and growth of the country adjacent to the streams than any other influence.

We believe that a thorough understanding of the measure would lead practically every person in the Wisconsin River valley to support it.

Clear Boxes for Display.

Deputy Revenue Collector Acquiesces in the plan of the city on Tuesday and while there he paid the Erlbaum office a pleasant call. He states that the notices concerning empty clear boxes for display purposes have been put rather strong, and that it is not the intent to cause dealers to stop the use of those altogether. The law reads that empty clear boxes on which the stamp has been destroyed, in the hands of dealers, may be used for display purposes, but the factory brand and the caution notice must be destroyed if the dealer wishes to give such boxes away. Therefore it has been customary to destroy only the stamp when giving boxes away.

Walthers-Scott.

Robert L. Walthers of Green Bay and Miss Ella May Scott of this city were married on Saturday at the home of the bride's parents on the east side, Rev. W. A. Peterson performing the ceremony. The young couple left the same day for the south after which they will return to Green Bay, where they will make their home.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Scott of this city and her many friends here wish them a long and happy journey thru life.

Nearing Completion.

The plant of the Grand Rapids Sash, Door and Blind Co. is rapidly nearing completion and the proprietors expect to have it in running order inside of a couple of weeks. They have their engine and mill in place and ready to start up, and have been waiting some little time for their machinery, which is expected almost daily. They have good steel plant and will be able to handle a large volume of work should it be found necessary.

Made a Record.

The mill of the Consolidated Water Power & Paper company made their record run one day last week when there was a total of seventy-seven and one-half tons of paper turned out in twenty-four hours. The amount of paper that is contained in a run of this sort is hardly appreciable upon first thought, but if used by a paper like the Tribune where the week's run amounts to a little over two hundred pounds, it would last in the neighborhood of fourteen years.

Ripon Glee Club.

A large crowd assembled at the Congregational church Monday evening to hear the entertainment by the Ripon Glee Club, and the audience seemed to be greatly pleased with the concert that the boys rendered. They were encouraged quite liberally, and they responded so willingly that it was a pleasure to hear them.

Plano Tuning.

Frank Brostowitz was in the city on Monday of late one of his eyes doctored. Recently while operating his portable sawmill some small piece of steel flew from the saw and struck him in the eye, and caused him considerable trouble. He had one piece removed, but he has since been suffering so much from the optic that he was under the impression that there was still some obstruction there that was bothering him.

Dr. V. P. Norton, who has been attending the Grand Rapids, Mich., veterinary college during the past winter, returned home on Sunday, having completed his course. Mr. Norton expects to take a partner in with him in the near future in the person of Dr. Bronson and the firm name will be Norton & Bronson. In the meantime Mr. Norton will attend to all calls in his line, and can be found by calling on telephone 161.

The Chambers Creamery Co. have recently added another vat to their equipment in their creamery in this city, and expect to soon put in another electric motor, their five horse power machine having become too small to handle the load it is called on to manipulate each day. The creamery is now turning out about three thousand pounds of butter a week, with a prospect of a large increase as soon as the weather becomes more like spring.

Scientists claim to have discovered that the tape worm is the natural enemy of tuberculosis and that the latter and the former cannot exist in the same system. The discovery has opened up a new field of experiment and it is expected a cure has been discovered for consumption. Verily, this is an age of progress, and even the most homely conditions are being turned to scientific account. The chances seem to be that the man with a tapeworm, instead of being a joke among his companions, will soon be the envy of all.

—Mrs. Plotcher Morgan who was in a dangerous state of health some time ago, is now perfectly well, thanks to the skill of Dr. McElwee, the Chicago specialist, who was consulted in her case. The doctor found some nervous trouble at the bottom of all her symptoms which, he said, caused them all. Mr. Morgan had been treated for various ailments; her stomach having failed to perform its function, several doctors thought the trouble was there, but Dr. McElwee traced the disease to her nervous system, and that he was right is proved by her rapid recovery.

Wausau News.—A deed was yesterday filed with the register of deeds conveying from the Grand Rapids Lumber Co. to Henry Rablin, of Grand Rapids, 1,140 acres of land in town 26 N., of range 6, this county. The consideration was $26,000. Those lands are situated in the northern part of the town of Bergen, are heavily timbered with mixed timber and are easily logged, the most distant 40 being only two miles' land from the Big Eau Claire river. The Grand Rapids Lumber Co. still owns a large acreage of land in the above town.

Wausau Pilot.—George Taylor of Metcote, Wyoming, arrived in the city on Sunday and left again for the west the day following. Mr. Taylor was not able to state why he would be able to ship his sheep in here, but when he does come he expects to bring six thousand with him. Other sheep men are trying the method of fattening sheep in Wisconsin and last week thirteen cars went from here headed for Hazelhurst, and another lot have been taken to Rhineland. So far the experiments along this line have proven very successful and the indications are that it will be practiced more as sheep men become more familiar with the scheme.

An Oconto County man has devised a method of killing crows from which he is reaping a pretty good thing. He recently captured a couple of the crows and he ties in a field at a place where he can reach them with a shot gun. When crows fly over the birds in the field flap their wings and make strenuous efforts to get away, at the same time kicking up quite a row, and the consequence is that the crows come down to see what is the matter, when the man with the gun takes a crack at them. As there is a bounty of ten cents apiece on the birds he gets a lot of shooting and at the same time reaps considerable profit. Last year he used a couple of dummies, which worked very well, but he reports that the present system beats it all hollow.

The Congregational society of this city have been figuring with the Baptist society for some time past with a view to obtaining the last lot that the Baptists have on the east side and letting the Baptists have the church that the Congregationalists now occupy. Had this deal been made the Congregationalists would have built a church edifice on the east side lots. The deal, however, was not made, and the Baptists are preparing to build their church. While their plans are not definitely made as yet, they are discussing the feasibility of constructing their church out of concrete blocks. Where churches have been erected of this material they present a handsome appearance and of course will stand for many years without much of any expense to keep them up. It is to be hoped that they will adopt this method as the appearance of a structure of this sort is something to be proud of.

Telephones are handy, not alone from a business standpoint but from a social as well. For instance, you can call a man a liar and if you hurry you can hang up the receiver before he calls you another. Then again, if he follows you up and you feel graciously you can call him down without being afraid of getting stung. But the best of all is the purpose they serve on a rainy day, which precludes a conversation across the back yard fence or short calls. One day last week it rained and if you had been where the writer was you might have heard one end of two women's conversation which as near as can be recalled, ran like this: "Hello. Thought I'd never get you. These telephone girls are away on a vacation half the time. Yes, I'm getting supper and only got a half minute to spare. Isn't his a horrid day? Had on my old wrapper all day and look like a clown dressed up in a gummy sack. That's lovely. Guess my potatoes are burning. Who's that that's got a baby? Everybody gets sick. Going to spring mine on Easter. Oh, box plate down the back and lace yoke. Don't tell, for it's the latest. In the Ladies' Home Journal. Just as I expected. But they never will be if they put it off much longer. Guess my potatoes are having a warm time of it. She's got a new girl. She makes me tired. He is to be pitied, poor fellow. Oh, I never tried that. If I had her walk I'd try and get it fixed. Yes, there's enough sales in town to run out a schooner. Got a pair for 10c. It's cheaper to go dressed up than naked. What's that? Come away. I know what she means. There is more hot air about her than you can get out of a coke oven. Ladies' Home Journal. Cap milk, two eggs. I feel as though I'd been to a laundry and got done up. I'm dying to see you. How lovely. Got 'em on now. She always talks that way. Don't tell anybody; I never do, not even to my husband. Sakes alive! It's not all her own by a long shot. No, brown eyes. Don't tell. She makes me weary. Force. You don't say. Guess every hired girl in town will have one. Plaited down the back with lace yoke. Don't tell. Are you going to vote election day? I'm going to. Last year I wore a man's shirt and this year I'm going to vote. Wonder what will be the next. Boro cream."
